It all dereads upon the individual who asks it. If one is adopt at mathematics, he should forariably make good in practically any phase of the art. The designing of audio and radio frequency transfers, variable candensers and inductances, etc., will be found reintively simple work. On the other hand, one may be imbued with a good knowledge of chemistry, in which case the development and perfection of permeable alloys for transformer cores and other apparatus will present an attractive field.

Young Men in Radio. Radio is really a young man's game. It is a young industry and naturally n lot of roung blood has been attract ed to it siready.

In fact, as far as the engineering and invention of radio, together with the raies, is concerned, the younger generation walk off with all the honors. However, radio is too young as business to place entirely in the hands of the newcomers in the induster. As far as the executive and manngerial ends are concerned, the older linelness man must still be relied upon, In fact, in such John as financing only the mature, reteran lusiness man with years of experience is suited for the

It does not mean that the younger generation has not succeeded in fulfilling with spirit and ability those various posis. However, older men are preferable in these capacities, not necessarily for the prestige of the organization, but for more efficient mannavient and amorrision. Panlandle-Plains Historical society. visited Sherrod a few days ago and obtained from him an account of his hutalo hunting experiences. One of the interesting statements made by Mr. Sherrod was that in 1875 buffaloes were killed in great numbers for their tongues, considered a great delicacy. His First Buttalo Hunt.

"I was Just a boy and was out here on the bullalo range in 1874 and 1875," he said. "I was seventeen years old when I came out the first time. We came out from Brown county, about 200 miles to the east, and there were only fire of us. We hunted for ment. That year you could see 200 and 300 coroles in a bunch, but the year these animals were thinned out. There were many men hunting, who killed the corotes for their skin.

"We really came a lot further out than peressary to kill the buffaloes but we had lots of fun. There were tens of thousands of buffaloes everywhere. When we got tired of one place we would move to another. We made houses of poles, covered with buffalo bides, lined and floored with the same. The second winter we came out here there were thirty-two of as from Brown county, and I killed 865 buffalo that winter myself. I didn't do anything but bunt.

"The first winter we loaded our wagons with ment. We took year Hage and two year olds and dried their home whole. We brought a wash kettle along with us and rendered un thirty-two kettles of full macrow and tallow. This got so hard that you rould throw it around like a chunk of wood. We would take an ax, break the bones and then scrape the marrose out. The marrow and tallow were used for cooking, making soap and the like.

"We killed enough buffaloes to furnish the people of Brown county with meat all the next year. Twelve months afterwards the meat would be as hard as a store on the outside, but good and fresh when cut into. We didn't salt our meat. The majority of the ment we cut in his chunks, as iarge needle gans and it cost us five cents a shot. We met two fellows up on it's head of the Calorado river the sevend year who had been out two menths and hado't killed a buffalo. Ther had these 'citizens' rifles and traded us some toberre to bill some bullaioes for them. We went out and killed about Alleen for them. No Trouble With Indiana.

"There were lots of Indiana the first year. We left our ramp many times and would lank back and son the Indiana aliting on the tops of our angens and mostna around our samp. They herer would bother anything orrept something in out or our make. We had to guard the mules every night. Many a night we have gone eff into a thicket without motes, and the Indiana would come toto camp and there all around us. There were more indiana over in Crosby county than around Tahoka lake. We never did have a fight with them, as they never all bother us. Lots of times we would ride around a point and meet a bunch of Indiana face to face, We would both stop, and in a citorie the indian definit would turn like borse and then all would torn and tide back the way they had come. "We never bothered with the but-talo hides in 1974 except to those a for up ten of our ment when we to united a saw create of their fattants Talula lake, but no water to the ploins lakes then,

"The second winter there were hundirate of most killing for hider

Calumet, Mich.-Old Maggle Harrington, forest wanderer, was found frozen to death, eight miles from her dilapidated old eably near the old Central mine in Copper country, northern Michigan, recently,

She was seventy years old. For the last fifty years Maggle has roamed the forests, fearless of man or beast, nt all times of the day or night, as wild as the gray wolf and as harmless us the deer.

At daybreak she would walk another ten or fifteen miles back to her own stoveless shack, or go on many miles in another direction to some miner's cable for a cupful of coffee.

of assassins. Juggins proves to be the grandson of a former steward of Ormerod's father, to whom Juggins feels himself in-debted. Ormered tells Juggins he has abandoned the Stuart can colonies to weaken England by forwarding French interests. At its head is Andrew Murray, a Scotsman, and a Frenchman, De Youlle, deadly enemy of Ormerod.

The two are in London further-to Governor Hurnet, friend of Juggins, and work to foll Murray. Disgulard as Juggins' servant, Ormerod arranges to take passage to America. On the ship

he meets a girl, Murray's daugh-

It was no use. I could not resist. The snakelike arms mustered me. One shifted swiftly to a grip on my legs. I was whirled into the air and dropped clear of the railing-falling, falling, until the cold waters engulfed me.

Color Has Big Part

in Home Construction Color is one of the most important features about the home. It governs to a surprisingly large degree not only appearances but temperament. It makes not only for beauty but for good or ill nature as well. Certain colors are Just as depressing as others are inspiring.

Women are just as particular, ordinarlly, about the coloring of the paper on the walls of their homes as they are about the color of their clothing, Men are less responsive, perhaps, and pay less attention to their environment, yet unconsciously for all that they are affected more or less. The same thing applies to the materiols of which your home is constructed. Instinctively you turn away from the house that has a dray and dreary appearance. Just as quickly you admire the one with a rich, warm coloring in the walls. Brick houses particularly have this quality made permanent in the burning of the bricks. In most other wait materials It must be artificially produced and frequently renewed.

Points to Remember

When Purchasing Home One thing that a man should never forget when he is buying a home is that the home will be the center of his family life, probably for many years. His children will be brought up in it and amidst its surroundings. In it his wife must do most of her work, and in it both he and his wire will spend most of their leisurs time. He should, therefore, look at the different properties available and see how they measure up by these common-sense, practical standards, it is well for the family to picture itself going through its daily routine in the new house, cooking, cleaning, going to work, school, play, etc., at all seasons.

The mere fact that a showy wantelplece is displayed, that a four-inch steel I-beam supports the floor, that a radio set has been installed or that several French pinte glass mirrors are built in doors should not determine his choice or induce him to pay no additional $500 for the property.

Surroundings Count

Merely to be assured of the charncter of surrounding development is not enough for the property owner, according to William I. Whitney, district sales manager of a leading Detroit company.

"The appreciation of a diamond's value," Mr. Whitney said, "will not be as great if it is set in chenn silver or bross. It may be the finest blue-white stone, but its setting detracts from an appreciation of its value. It has always been the same with property. A house might be splendidly constructed, have architectural beauties of the highest order, but if the character of the surroundings do not fit it, its desirability will be less and the investment In it will suffer. For that reason peaple have come to see the importance of choosing property which is located In surroundings whose development is controlled. The clause for increasing property value is influenced tremendously by what goes on around it."

Establishing an Industry Economy, service and prestige are the factors which usually determine for the manufacturer or distributor where he Mail establish his plant, executive office or branch.

Under economy he considers the and rent values, taxes, availability of raw materials be uses in his business, market for finished products and labor so

Under prestige comes the reputation of the locality as a business center of wide advertising value, a place which is not unknown to his trade or to kin dred trades.

Choosing Building Site Every individual business site bas larger possibilities for certain kinds of business enterprises than it has for others. The property manager who ran arrive at Just which kind of busi ness would be crest successful in the exact location of a particular building in his charge and who can make the reasons clear to ble prospective i tenant, is a property manager who has gone for to minimize the vacancy factor in the earning capacity of that buttelles.

Home Ownership The spandest thing in America to day is electore owneredly. It is the beyond to the real prosperity of the individual. People should own a home before they own an authorable or a Partlin.

A man who owns a home is a better children and better industries for the controlly in which he lives.- Ex-Change.

To Teach Home Building Two leading educational institu tions, the state university at Columbux and the mostdipal university of Cincinnali, will begin this fall to give instructions on the organization of building and loan associations. More than 50,000 homes in Other were direcily franced by building and loan AMOUNTHOUS THAT YEAR:

SCIENCE IS USED TO BARE CRIME

Novel Apparatus Registers Guilty Excitement.

New York,-Using specially devised apparatus to measure the electrical resistance of the human skin and an electrical stethoscope which enabled the audience to hear the thumping of the heart of the person under examtnation, .Dr. A. P. Link, instructor in psychology at New York university, demonstrated to the New York Electrical society how science can aid in detecting and apprehending eriminats.

Three persons selected from the andlence were sent out of the room under sented instructions. One of the trio chosen by lot went to a room on the tenth floor of the building where a letter was taken out of an overcont pocket.

From the envelope $10 was removed. the letter was replaced and the "culprit," whose identity was not disclosed to Dactor Link or those in the audience, returned to the auditorium.

Doctor Link then subjected each of the three to electrical psychology tests. The emotions aroused by the guilt of the "robber" became fastantly evident on the records of the apparatus. An electrical stethoscope, specially devised by the Bell Telephone laboratories, amplifying the heart-heat sounds more than 100,000 times, enabled the andlence to hear the thumping of the heart. When the young man who had opened the envelope and removed the $10 was asked questions bearing on the "robbery" his quickened thumping of heart when the key wordwere mentioned was instantly made

In midition to the quickened heart beat of the one who removed the $10 from the envelope, "guilty excitement" was also demonstrated in the form of n moving spot of light thrown on a screen in full view of the nudlence. The spot shot clear across the screen when the person questioned became unduly excited.

Doctor Link explained that excitement lowered the electrical resistance of the skin. This, he said, was especially when an effort was made to He or to conceal the truth.

According to Doctor Link this reaction is entirely outside the control attempting to conceal." Doctor Link also explained a number of psychological tests, electrical and otherwise, now in use for the selection of employees, either for hire or promotion. He said these tests must not be used as infallible guides, but as an aid to the general common sensa

HOME OF CHARLIE ROSS IS WRECKED

Recalls Famous Kidnaping Case of 1874.

Philadelphia. -- Bowing to time, showing signs of uge in its vacant windows, and its moss covered, drouping verandas, a bleak, weather-beaten house, perhaps the most interesting structure in Philadelphia except Independence hall, today is crumbling under the blows of the pickax and the wrench of the crowbar.

This stolld three-story dwelling, of "the cupola era," rising on its high knoll above one of the declivities of Washington lane, in Germantown, once sheltered Charlle Ross, the boy whose disappearance has remained one of the mysteries of America and whose name through a half century was carried in hope, anxiety and despair to all corners of the earth.

Now it is being torn down to make room for the progress of a new gencration which remembers little of the tragedy which came to the occupants of this house.

Manalon Became Church, The Ross mansion, for the last decade, has been the sent of the Cliveden Presbyterian church, With the growth of the congregation it was found inadequate and a new church has been erected to the rear of the house. Now the house itself is being razed and on its site another church is to be built. In the disappearance of the Rosa home. Philadelphia loses one of its greatest shrines of the curious. From every section of the country have come visitors to gaze in nwe at the old stone dwelling which has stond throughout the years a mute reminder of the tragic search for the lost boy.

More than fifty-two years have possed since that July day in 1874 when golden-baired Charile, four-year old son of Christian K. Ross, disappeared. The boy was playing on the lawn of his father's estate when he was entired away by two men be lieved to have been responsible for his death. William Mosher and an accomplice drove up to the estate in spring wagon and with promises of candy and a ride lured Charile and his elder brother, Walter, into athe wagon.

The four drove off and at the corner drug store some distance away Walter was given 25 cents to buy rangy. When he returned with his purchasis the wagen, the two men and his little brother had disappeared. Charite was never seen again by his family.

Until bis death 23 years later, Chris tion liess, the father, spent his life and fortune in an unsuccessful worldwide search for his boy, but no definite word was ever received concern-

New York. - Studies of honesty among school children in cities and towns of the East Indicate that children of wealth are most prone to steat money, that girls more often cheat in the class room and boys in games. and that honesty is in direct proportion to intelligence.

The tests are being made by psychologists engaged in a "character education inquiry" at the Columbia

Will the Bingham Develop. ment follow the Gulf Island Project?

CENTRAL MAINE POWER COMPANY now has ready its 27,000 horsepower hydroelectric development on the Androscoggin River at Lewiston-Auburn.

This development was built as large as possible in order to get the cheapest power from the water available-the larger the development the cheaper the kilowatt hour cost of pro-

Eventually this power will probably all be used in Lewiston-Auburn and nearby towns and farms.

Yet suppose Lewiston-Auburn was not interconnected with the Company's lines so that the surplus power could be sold elsewhere in its territory.

This present development would not have been possible!

Local power users couldn't use that much power at present, The cost of the unused part would be so much that no one could afford to build the development.

A similar development—but for a still larger amount—is up to Maine people today.

A 100,000 horsepower development is awaiting construction on the Kennebec River above Bingham. This development, because of its size would generate power for charger than any development in Maine; as cheap as any power in the United States cast of Ningara Fulls, But Maine can't use all the power-new.

So the only way that Maine can gelethis blg power development is to interconnect its lines with the larger manufacturing centers in the pearby states, operate the proposed plant at Iuli capacity and sell whatever power Unine users do not need.

Then Maine can be assured the development of its idle water and the consequent CHEAP power it will bring; new powerusing industries to come and use this power; hundreds of thousands of dollars in taxes; more homes and people, lower taxes.

Does Maine want this?
